THOROUGHLY MODERN DIVA

Denise Van Outen, presenter of VH1's 100 Greatest Women in Music, has no illusions about deserving a place on that list herself, or even on a list of the top 1000. But she can sing. Her career in West End musicals stretches from Les Misérables, when she was 11, to Chicago just recently, and she is currently developing a one-woman show with Andrew Lloyd Webber.

Which female vocalists, I ask, would feature in her own all-time top 10? 'Obviously Madonna. And Tina Turner's amazing. And Alanis Morissette. And I love all the really glamorous singers, like Diana Ross and Shirley Bassey. My mum and dad used to play a lot of Motown, so I grew up listening to Diana Ross, although I let that slip in my teens, I got a bit street. But I did get really into Karen Carpenter. I like really musical singers. My all-time favourite of hers is, "Why do birds, suddenly appear, every time ..."'

With this, Van Outen is off, singing to me, and very enjoyable it is, too. When eventually she stops she adds Kylie Minogue to her list of musical inspirations. This is no surprise as in 1998 she recorded a cover of one of her tracks – the duet with Jason Donovan, Especially for You. With Johnny Vaughan filling in for Donovan, it reached number three in the charts. 'I'm a huge Kylie fan,' she says.

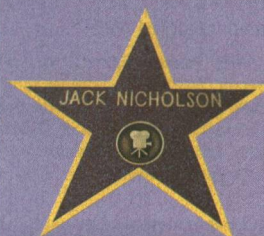

The first album I bought was probably one of Kylie's, and at theatre school me and my friends, like Dani Behr and Emma Bunton, used to dance around in the toilets pretending to be Kylie. In fact I still pretend to be her. There are about 10 of us who regularly hook up, and the Kylie records always come out. So do the Nolans. I have one CD stand with all the cheesy pop music on, and that's the one we attack. The Best of the Nolans is at the top.'

I ask a searching question: which is her favourite Nolan sister? 'Definitely Linda,' she says, in mock-seriousness.

And which would be the record she would take to a desert island? 'Total Eclipse of the Heart, by Bonnie Tyler. But I'd have to have some Kylie as well, to perk me up.'

LA CONFIDENTIAL

True believer

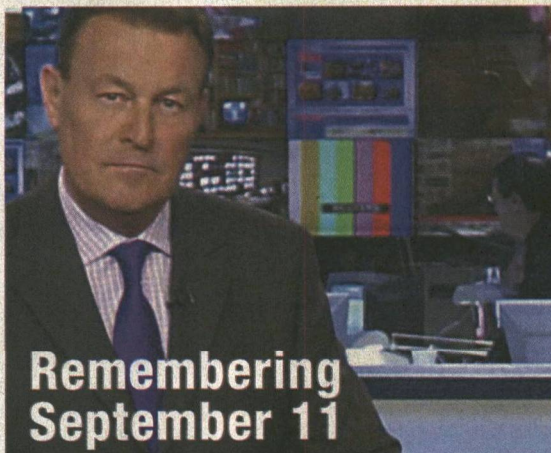

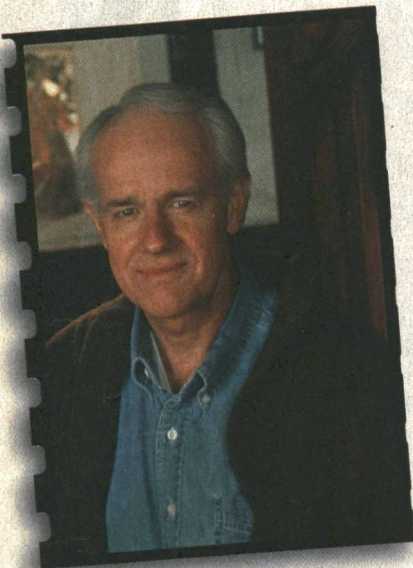

Mike Farrell is still best known for the years he spent as Captain BJ Hunnicut in the hit comedy series, *M*A*S*H*. Yet Farrell has many more strings to his bow, not least an engaging performance in Providence, a new drama in which he plays a vet who communicates more easily with animals than humans, but has to learn how to be a proper father to his kids after his domineering wife dies.

He is also a successful film producer and a tireless human rights campaigner. So with all this on his CV, I ask, and at 63 years of age, does it ever irk him that BJ Hunnicut continues to loom so large in our minds? 'Not at all,' he says. 'People are always very kind and respectful.'

Farrell presides over Family Motion Pictures, which promotes films suitable for family viewing. And he has been surprised by the enthusiasm for Providence. 'It seems to go against the grain, but then maybe that's why it has been well-received. I feel the so-called reality shows are not reality at all, but display how commercialism has outstripped creativity.'

I nod and slip one last nagging question in: 'What did BJ stand for?' He laughs, and then replies, 'Anything you like.'

Providence, Hallmark, starts Monday 30th, 12noon

Remembering September 11

It is apt that Jeremy Thompson, the authoritative and hugely experienced Sky News anchorman, will be in New York fronting the channel's coverage of the first anniversary of the September 11 atrocities. For it was Thompson who, with Kay Burley, anchored coverage of the terrible events as they unfolded on that unforgettable day a year ago.

'I was at home when the first plane hit,' he recalls, 'and it was immediately my gut instinct, after 30 years in journalism, that it was no accident. I was due on air later that afternoon, but my boss called me in straight away, and Kay and I stayed on the air from about 2pm for the next seven hours or so.'

'It was gruelling because we were living it with the viewer, trying as best we could to find words to fit the extraordinary pictures, but also trying to keep our own emotions under control. I was aware that we must not overstate anything and keep a factual narrative going, and resist the temptation to speculate.'

How did September 11, 2001, compare, I ask, with all the other eventful days he has reported on during what is actually 35 years of journalism (he started as a newspaper trainee in 1967)?

'Well, I have reported on genocide in Rwanda, on a dozen wars around the world, and I was at Tiananmen Square. As a consequence I am less shockable than most. But this was like nothing else. To see those huge monuments to modern America crumbling ... it was hard to believe and very hard to describe. I think most people thought, even after the planes had gone in, that the towers would probably still stand.'

When finally he was able to hand over to someone else, what did he do?

'Well, I know that Kay said she felt like breaking down. Whether she did, I don't know. I went home, tried to get it all assembled in the right order in my mind, and then had a very, very stiff whisky.'

Fantasy island

Dinosaurs are back on our TV screens. But this time they speak several languages and live alongside humans in peaceful co-existence. Daphne Lockyer visits the spectacular set of the miniseries Dinotopia

NEW SERIES

Dinotopia

Sky One,
Sundays from
8th, 7.00pm

ON SET FOR DINOTOPIA, the faces of the several hundred impressively costumed extras say it all. They stare at their surroundings in open-mouthed astonishment, spinning on their heels to take in the full impression of the huge Waterfall City. They seem almost to be holding their breath.

Minutes later, in suitably surreal fashion, actor Jim Carter (who plays the city's Mayor Waldo) arrives on a kind of milk float, wearing a costume so elaborate and heavy that it makes walking to the set impossible. 'Dear God, look at this,' he says, stepping out and breaking the rapt silence. 'It's like something out of The Birth of a Nation!'

The reference to the ground-breaking 1915 silent epic is very appropriate. The lavishly created nation in this case is Dinotopia, a timeless world in which humans and dinosaurs live in harmony. The set is the physical realisation of a city portrayed by the writer and illustrator James Gurney in his Dinotopia books, A Land Apart from Time and The World Beneath. 'This set is just magnificent and goes way beyond what I created in the books,' says Gurney. 'I couldn't be happier.'

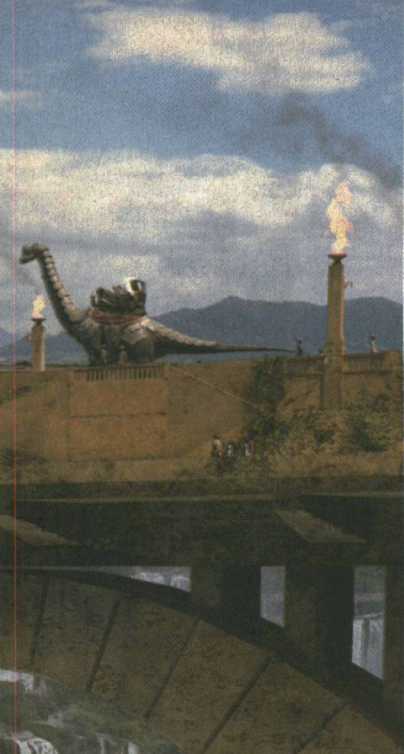

Bringing the lost continent of Dinotopia to life has been a colossal undertaking for Hallmark Entertainment – a company now synonymous with astonishing TV fantasies such as The 10th Kingdom, Arabian Nights and Gulliver's Travels. The six-hour miniseries proved to be a big hit when it was shown on American TV and now comes to Sky One in three parts.

The production required some of the biggest sets ever seen on the small screen, including that for Waterfall City, which is the largest set ever constructed in Europe. Occupying a five-and-a-half acre backlot at Pinewood, it required 85 miles of scaffolding, 1200 gallons of paint, 140 tons of casting plaster and 170 carpenters for its creation.

On top of this, Hallmark made full use of the computer wizardry of a 75-strong team at London's FrameStore, the company behind the BBC's Walking with Dinosaurs. These artists not only created the cast of saurian characters, but also enhanced the sets with advanced digital computer technology.

'Huge as the set of Waterfall City appears, it's only 10 per cent of what viewers will see,' explains FrameStore's Mike McGee. 'With the computer, we've created myriad buildings, cascading aqueducts and waterfalls tumbling throughout the city. The result is something that looks like Manhattan perched on top of Niagara Falls. We're creating something truly awe-inspiring.'

The dinosaurs, too, are a thing of wonder. But, as most of these were added to the film later, they aren't visible today on set. One exception is Zippo, Dinotopia's lovable leading dinosaur. He is played during filming by an actor in a Zippo suit who is later replaced by a computer-generated character.

Not all of the dinosaurs are computerised images. The skills of Jim Henson's Creature Shop are apparent in the animatronic puppets of the dangerous mosasaurs (giant prehistoric reptiles) and '26', a cute baby dinosaur that lies at the very heart of the Dinotopia tale.

The story itself is the work of award-winning screenwriter Simon Moore. He wanted to move away from the Jurassic Park cliché of dinosaur-versus-man conflict. 'I thought, "Enough already about dinosaurs leaning over and tearing human heads off!" That's not what Dinotopia is about. It's a place where humans and dinosaurs co-exist in harmony.'

Into this world come two troubled, spoilt teenage brothers, Karl and David, played by Canadian Tyron Leitso and American Wentworth Miller. They land in the lost continent of Dinotopia when, while on holiday, their father's plane crashes during a freak Caribbean storm, and there they meet Marion (English actress Katie Carr).

It soon emerges that the sunstones that represent Dinotopia's life force are failing, allowing dangerous forces to threaten its harmonious civilisation. The brothers, who both fall for Marion, become embroiled in a battle to save this mysterious lost continent.

'What's great about Dinotopia is that it's an action adventure with goodies and baddies as well as being a story about love, survival and coming of age,' says Miller. 'Then, on top of all that, you get astonishing dinosaurs that can walk, talk, lay eggs – and work in offices, for heaven's sake! As you get drawn deep inside the story, none of this seems unnatural.'

The makers of Dinotopia invested millions of dollars in the ambitious project, spending $2.7m on creating the spectacle of Waterfall City alone.

According to Simon Moore, the appeal of Dinotopia cuts across all ages, social classes and genders. It has, he says, 'something for everyone'.

'Best of all, it's not the usual TV fare,' he says proudly. 'And that's great because, personally, I have no interest in writing something that takes place in a lawyer's office.'

With its fantastical story, astonishing sets and computer-generated effects, there's no risk of Dinotopia being confused with your average TV drama. Ally McBeal it most definitely is not. ●

Facing the future: below, l-r, Karl, Marion and David, holding '26', and the mischievous outlaw Cyrus

Welcome to Dinotopia

THE HUMANS

Karl Scott (Tyron Leitso)
Rebellious, he acts on his instincts and often finds himself in trouble.

David Scott (Wentworth Miller)
Constantly at odds with his brother, David is intrigued by Dinotopia and is inclined to explore.

Mayor Waldo (Jim Carter)
The regal overseer of Dinotopia's capital, Waterfall City, Mayor Waldo is protective of his daughter, Marion.

Rosemary (Alice Krige)
Dinotopia's revered matriarch, Rosemary is mother to Marion, and a real earth mother.

Marion (Katie Carr)
The beautiful Marion is independent and strong-willed, but naïve.

Cyrus Crabb (David Thewlis)
Dinotopia's resident rogue, he's a pirate descendant who shuns the Dinotopian codes.

THE DINOSAURS

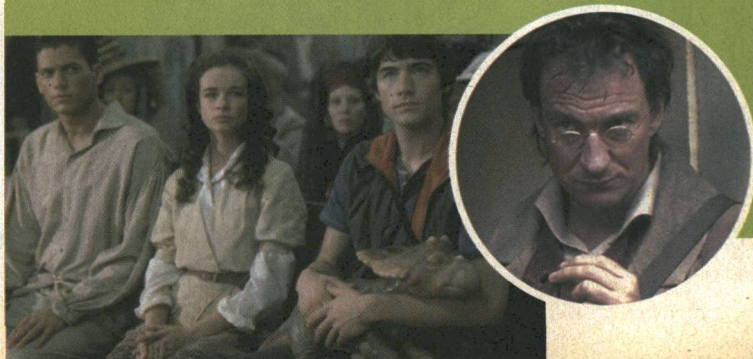

Zippo (voiced by Lee Evans)
The highly intelligent stenosauros is an academic who speaks 17 human and saurian languages. The multilingual librarian befriends Karl and David.

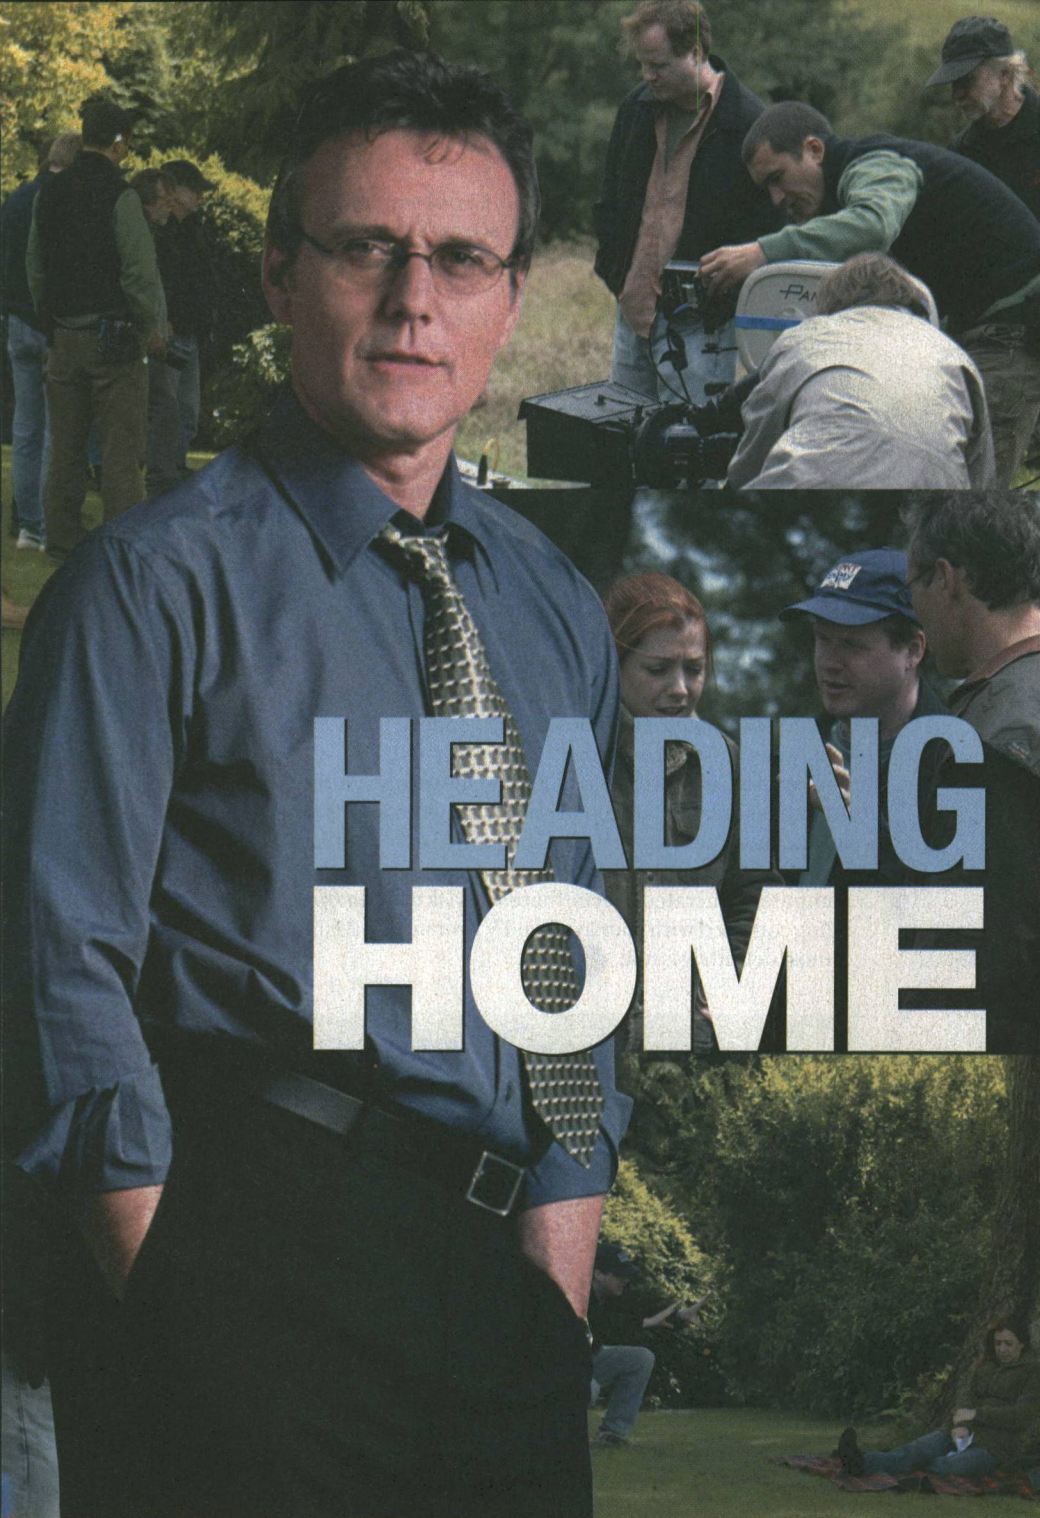

'26'
A baby chasmosaurus, the adorable '26' is given to Karl to rear and becomes his saurian life-partner.

Pterosaur
Pterosaurs have a huge wingspan of 30ft. Also known as Skybax, they form Dinotopia's very own air force.

Brachiosaurus
The most hardworking dinosaur toils the land and acts as public transport in the form of the brachiosaurus bus.

Mosasaur
The deadly mosasaurs, which look like giant crocodiles, infest the waters of Dinotopia.

HEADING HOME

The show that was famous for taking us to hell and back is exploring pastures new – the British countryside. Jenny Eden reports from the set of Buffy the Vampire Slayer

IT'S HARD TO IMAGINE anyone who has worked on a television set allowing a 40-strong film crew to take over their house.

So Buffy creator Joss Whedon must have conjured up magical powers of persuasion for Anthony Head to allow him use of his secluded Somerset home for two days to shoot the first ever British episode of Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

When Head was playing Buffy's mentor, Giles, he spent his time jetting backwards and forwards between LA and the home he shares with partner Sarah and daughters Daisy and Emily, an idyllic countryside house that is half an hour outside Bath.

On a trip to Britain Whedon visited Head and decided his Regency house

FILE UNDER 'FINISHED'

The truth may be out there, but The X-Files fans have waited a long time to find out just what that was. As the series draws to a close, some long-awaited answers will finally be revealed. In the final episode, Agent Fox Mulder faces a military tribunal, resulting in some startling revelations as well as the appearance of a few familiar faces. In the meantime, here's a rundown of the show's major characters and story points. Words: Joe Nazzaro would be perfect for Giles's retreat when the storyline sees him leave Sunnydale to return to England.

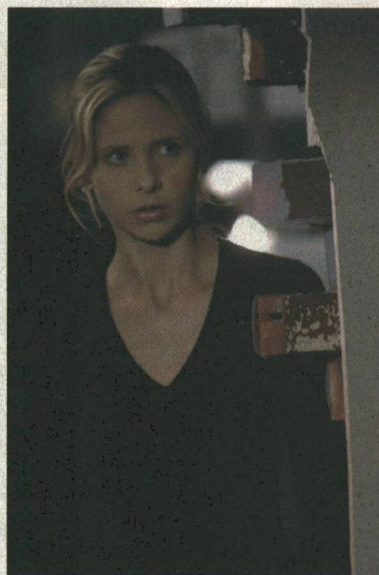

So while a film crew are desperately trying to light a grey drizzling English summer day to make it look sunny, everyone else is making themselves at home. Alyson Hannigan, who plays Willow Rosenberg, and her boyfriend, Angel star Alexis Denisof (Wesley Wyndam-Pryce), who's along for the ride, are clinging to the Aga in the kitchen to keep warm. Head's dog is snoring under the cluttered kitchen table, Emily and Daisy keep popping in and out for hugs from their US friend, Sarah is buttering toasted fruit loaf and Tony is showing off his prowess with his new cappuccino machine.

'Joss asked if he could use the house and we thought it might be quite fun,' says Head. 'Joss only asks for something if he's got a good reason so I had no hesitation and I think it will look stunning.'

The British episode kicks off the new series starting on Sky One in January with Willow, whose evil plan to destroy the world was foiled at the end of the last series, being sent to stay with Giles to learn how to handle her magic powers.

But Whedon admits he's been itching for an excuse to set an episode in Britain since Buffy first began.

'Since year one I thought it would be fun to get the action out of Sunnydale and this gives me a great excuse,' he says. 'I went to college in Winchester and I've always loved it

'I'd been to Tony's house before and I knew it had the feeling I was looking for' Joss Whedon here so I wanted to make an episode in Britain. With Alyson and Tony the only actors involved it became financially feasible.

'I'd been to Tony's house before and I knew it had the feeling I was looking for. But I think Tony is insane to let us use his home.'

As the camera crew gingerly pick their way past the garden ornaments to set up reflectors to mimic sunlight, you can see what he means. One crew member almost sinks into the cess pit as he wanders around trying to get reception on his mobile. And the puzzled local postman is relieved of his handful of letters by a guard who won't let him go up the path.

The field at the bottom of the hill has become home to the crew's toilets and canteen while the barn up the lane has had the tractors shifted to make way for the cranes used for the next day's filming. But if you can ignore all the chaos and urgency that comes with a film crew, all you can see from the house is picture postcard perfect rolling hills.

It's easy to see why Head called a halt to his transatlantic commuting and quit the show a year ago. But the British episode means fans will see more of Giles in the new series and Whedon has been working on tempting him back for more. This new season sees a return to the original Buffy concept of the youngsters working together to fight vampires and demons rather than fighting among themselves. And there's more emphasis on Sarah Michelle Gellar again.

For Head, it's offering the perfect solution to his problems. 'I said I wanted to leave because I wanted to be with my family, but Joss has said I can be a recurring character, which gives me the best of both worlds. And rather than me having to go to LA the whole production has come to me.'

'My only regret about letting them use my house is the English weather - it won't stop raining.'

WORLDS APART

Two of this month's sci-fi dramas have successfully made the giant leap from big to small screen – Stargate SG-1, bowing out with its sixth series, and The Dead Zone, making its cable debut

NOW SHOWING

Stargate SG-1,

Sky One, Wednesday 18th, 9.00pm, then Wednesdays from 25th, 8.00pm

Stargate,

Carlton Cinema, Saturday 21st, 10.45pm

STARGATE BEGAN AS AN epic space-blockbuster in 1994. Now, in a cycle worthy of the intergalactic portal itself, the award-winning spin-off series Stargate SG-1 enters its sixth and final series which, in turn, leads to a new feature film.

The original series picked up where the film left off with Earth threatened by the Goa'uld, a race of parasites using humans as hosts, and the assembling of a secret team, Stargate SG-1. Colonel Jack O'Neill emerged from retirement and sought out nerdy Egyptologist Daniel Jackson on the planet Abydos. Jackson joined the newly formed SG-1 when his wife, Sha're was abducted by Apophis, a powerful System Lord.

Award-winning special effects and intricate storylines apart, the success of Stargate SG-1 is largely down to its casting. MacGyver's Richard Dean Anderson stepped into Kurt Russell's gung ho boots as Colonel O'Neill and brought a new humour to the role.

Meanwhile, James Spader's Jackson was reprised by Michael Shanks who quickly became the series heart-throb. Elsewhere, strong female roles – including Amanda Tapping as Major/Dr Samantha Carter, an astro-physics genius – built a loyal following.

The sixth series resolves many old plotlines and lays the groundwork for the new movie. The evil Apophis has been annihilated, but a new deadly Goa'uld superpower, Anubis, seems unstoppable. Meantime, Dr Jackson has suffered lethal radiation and moved to a higher plane of existence (Michael Shanks fans needn't fear – he makes a guest appearance in the new series).

In his place, there's Corin Nemec who was first introduced in the fifth-season finale as Jonas Quinn, a human leader from another planet who visits Earth and becomes entangled with the SG-1 team. Quinn continues to play a vital role in the sixth series.

Little is certain about the new film, although it's rumoured Shanks will star. What is known is that the plotline will evolve the Stargate and lay seeds for a new live-action spin-off series, Stargate Atlantis. And for those junior Stargate fans there'll soon be a half-hour animated spin-off on Fox Kids. SALLY O'SHAUGHNESSY

AMERICAN CABLE'S SURPRISE hit this summer is The Dead Zone, based on Stephen King's 1979 best-selling novel. The series broke US cable-channel records when it debuted on 16 June.

It stars Anthony Michael Hall as a teacher who's involved in a car crash and awakens from a six-year coma to find he has psychic powers. But why remake King's novel, which was produced as a 1983 feature film starring Christopher Walken?

To writer/producer Michael Piller, who developed the series with his son, Shawn, and previously co-created the genre hits Star Trek: Deep Space Nine and Voyager, the answer is simple.

'What interested me about The Dead Zone,' explains Piller, 'is that it's about a charismatic man finding his place in a new world in which he's not quite sure how to fit in.'

'You couldn't have a more humanistic journey for any character in the world. Certainly when King wrote the book, he was looking at a Jesus metaphor, and that's a fascinating thing to look at in contemporary society.'

According to Piller, the key was finding the right actor to play King's psychic hero, Johnny Smith. 'We went through the tedious process of interviewing every actor who was interested and in town. But Anthony Michael Hall was my first choice from the moment I saw Pirates of Silicon Valley (the TV drama in which Hall played Bill Gates). He's interesting, unique, off-centre, and the key word was off-centre.'

For Hall, former Brat Packer star of Sixteen Candles, The Breakfast Club and other Eighties teen comedies, The Dead Zone marks a major career shift. 'It's an incredible gift because of the discovery process involved.'

'I've learned about clairvoyance and clairaudience and psychometry, where psychics use their hands to "see" things. I'm trying to use my entire body and mind in approaching the character and getting well versed in the reality of it.'

As in King's novel, Johnny awakens from his coma to find his former fiancée, Sarah (Nicole de Boer) has married local sheriff Walt Bannerman (Chris Bruno).

But in the series, Johnny and Sarah share a son, creating an interesting triangle. 'This is the father of my child,' notes de Boer, 'and we have feelings for each other. I could up and decide to divorce my husband; that's the position that Sarah is in right now, and that's why she's so torn.'

Although US cable TV initially only ordered 13 episodes of The Dead Zone, ratings have been so successful that they've picked up a full 22-episode season. 'Whether it ends tomorrow, or runs for seven years,' claims Hall, 'I'm making the most of it!'

Insists Piller: 'I want to use everything that the master provided us for story material, and really look at The Dead Zone universe with meticulous detail. We want to make it clear to King's audience that we're doing this with respect and honour to the original material.'

THE JET AIRPLANE AND the spoon have one thing in common – they're both inventions. It's just one's more impressive than the other and will get you to Australia quicker.

We take so much in life for granted. Edison invented the light bulb, John Logie Baird the television and Charles Babbage created a precursor of the computer. All these are modern-day essentials, yet we rarely consider their genius creators. It's official: inventors are undervalued.

However, that may be about to change. A new Discovery programme, What's the Big Idea?, hosted by Suzi Perry (Grand Prix motorcycling) and Adrian Simpson (5th Gear), brings Britain's inventors out of the garden shed and into the spotlight.

'Inventors have this image of being mad professor-types with sticky-out hair, light bulbs over their heads and things blowing up around them,' notes Perry. 'But when you think about it, anybody sitting around at home could invent something and it could work. Inventors can come from any walk of life.'

In a series of roadshows, WTBI? tours the country, meeting members of the public who pitch their bright ideas. A panel of experts, known as product champions, offer advice and act as judges. The winner will see their product developed and promoted.

The Glasgow opener alone features a self-extinguishing chip-pan, an

In the water it's never at sea: Peter, Nick and Robin, of 4C Design, showcase their ingenious, self-righting life raft ocean-survival unit, a perfect golf-swing harness, a collapsible washing machine for travellers, and more.

It seems so simple – and is. One WTBI? expert is John Emanuel, chairman of a technology transfer company helping inventors take their gizmos from the drawing board into the marketplace. He says, 'I was talking the other day about inventing the impossible, and thought of a self-motivating lawnmower.

'It was an exercise in creative thinking, illustrating that one can look at almost any object and do something impossible with it. You or I could sit in the pub and invent lots of things, it's just that most of them would be trivial. Some years ago, the company had a plague of soap dishes.'

The British inventor is much less rare than we might imagine. Take Adrian Simpson's father and grandfather, for instance. 'My dad invents an awful lot, things like gardening tools. My grandad invented a mini-helicopter in his house. He couldn't actually get it out once he'd finished it, and had to dismantle it.'

It's worth persevering because inventing can be lucrative – look at James Dyson, the vacuum-cleaner man. Where we Brits most often fall down, says John Emanuel, is in failing to see an idea through. Too many inventions never get past the drawing stage through lack of ambition or a wariness of taking commercial risks.

Arguably the greatest inventor, Leonardo da Vinci – who dreamed up the parachute, submarine, helicopter and centrifugal pump, among others – never saw his ideas realised purely because the technology did not exist to create them. It may have played on his mind, as he developed a strange sense of humour in later life. A favourite trick was to inflate sheep's bladders indoors with bellows, forcing bemused visitors into the corner of a room.

Budding inventors, don't let this happen to you. ●

Denzel Washington cemented his reputation as one of Hollywood's finest leading men in roles as dignified, if often troubled, heroes – yet he needed to let loose as a ruthless villain to bag his Best Actor Oscar. Words: Kim Newman

IT'S IRONIC. AFTER SO many true-life, noble and suffering roles – as Steve Biko in Cry Freedom, as Malcolm X, as the unjustly jailed boxer in Hurricane – Denzel Washington finally snagged his Best Actor Oscar for playing a flamboyant baddie in Training Day.

Like Richard Gere, who trashed his somewhat smug, Buddhist, ladies' man image in Internal Affairs, Washington found he could cut loose by playing the rottenest of all villains – a corrupt cop. Lecturing his dazzled and naïve sidekick on the ways of the street, while ensnaring him in a perfect frame-up, Washington turned in a perfectly Mephistophelean performance.

Too often tagged this generation's Sidney Poitier – perhaps because he does handsome-but-masculine in a way white male movie stars are no longer that comfortable with – Washington has been around longer than you might think.

Born in Mount Vernon, New York, in 1954, he considered dignified professions like the law and journalism before becoming a classically trained actor (he was far more fluent than Keanu Reeves with the verse of Much Ado about Nothing). Washington made his 1981 screen debut in the dire Carbon Copy, a high-concept farce in which middle-aged, uptight and Jewish George Segal has to make a relationship with the black teenage son he didn't know he had.

After that, Washington got his head down and took a regular TV gig on St Elsewhere, the ER of the Eighties. He then began his run of intense, black-themed dramas with supporting roles in A Soldier's Story and Cry Freedom. By the end of the decade, he'd snagged his first Oscar, as best supporting actor, for the flag-waving Civil War drama Glory. He'd also established himself as a movie star, given the full glamour treatment by Spike Lee as the jazzman in Mo' Better Blues.

WASHINGTON HEIGHTS

It seems every black actor has to play at least one fast-talking, sharp-dressing hustler/pimp/dealer (even Morgan Freeman did, in Street Smart). Washington followed suit as Napoleon Stone in Heart Condition, in which the ghost of his murdered character nags slobbish-cop Bob Hoskins – who'd received Stone's heart in a transplant – into solving the case.

Major biopic vehicles, augmented by turns in such issue-heavy films as Philadelphia and Courage under Fire, kept Washington in the frame as a Serious Actor. But he still turned to the odd cop-action genre film: a straight revenge tale in Ricochet, a science-fiction version in Virtuosity and a horror take with Fallen. Not to deciding not to commit suicide.

In this month's Remember the Titans – a drama about one of those American sports studio heads bizarrely assume the rest of the world will understand – Washington's a football coach overcoming racism. It's yet another 'true story' film, with a happier ending than Malcolm X and without the agonising long haul of Hurricane.

He's got his big gong now, and doesn't have to worry about competition from Wesley Snipes, whose action pictures are verging on the straight-to-video, or Will Smith, whose Ali was Diet Denzel

'Washington does handsome-but-masculine in a way that white male movie stars are no longer that comfortable with'

mention the big political terrorist-drama of The Siege, the submarine suspense of Crimson Tide and the period private-eye movie Devil in a Blue Dress.

Having faced off with the likes of Russell Crowe, Gene Hackman and Bruce Willis, all of whom made his handsome heroics seem stiff, he went for weird in The Bone Collector, in which the only acting competition came from under-qualified Angelina Jolie. Washington played a quadriplegic genius who solves the case of a serial killer from his bed, by wiggling his forefinger while at best. Likewise, Samuel L. Jackson is never going to be a heartthrob.

Indeed, Washington remains the biggest black dramatic star currently working, and his career seems set to outlast passing fads like Martin Lawrence and Chris Tucker. ●

Role-r coaster: the ever-versatile Washington has cruised through performances in (clockwise from top left) Malcolm X, Remember the Titans, Training Day, Hurricane, Cry Freedom, and with and without Bob Hoskins in Heart Condition

TOP PREMIERES

Men of Honor

Sky Movies Premier, Saturday 14th, 8.00pm
This old-fashioned against-the-odds drama may be manipulative and a little predictable, but it's impossible not to be moved by the inspiring, real-life struggle of its hero. In a rare meaty role, Cuba Gooding Jr projects a quiet dignity and determination as Carl Brashear, who strove to overcome racism, and later the loss of a leg, to become the US Navy's first black diver. Robert De Niro is memorably loathsome as Brashear's nemesis, the gruff, bigoted instructor Master Chief Billy Sunday.

Chocolat

Sky Movies Premier, Saturday 7th, 8.00pm
An enchanting adaptation of the Joanne Harris novel, which examines how the arrival of a chocolate maker (Juliette Binoche) in a small French village galvanises the close-knit community. Swedish director Lasse Hallström conjures up a fairy-tale ambience and encourages winning performances from an ensemble that also includes Johnny Depp, Alfred Molina and Judi Dench.

CLASSICS TO CATCH

Glengarry Glenn Ross

Carlton Cinema, Tuesday 3rd, 9.00pm
Director James Foley may not have opted to really open out the David Mamet play set in the cut-throat world of real estate sales (the film feels rather stagey), but the performances he encourages are powerful indeed, with the cleverly cast ensemble giving note-perfect recitals of Mamet's mesmerising, sing-song dialogue.

Worthy of special mention are the late Jack Lemmon and Al Pacino: the former brings a heart-breaking pathos to the part of the past-his-prime salesman shouldering a bad streak; while Pacino projects an unsettling aloof air as the invincible supersalesman who stalks his prey with icy precision, calmly toying with them for hours before his perfectly timed pounce.

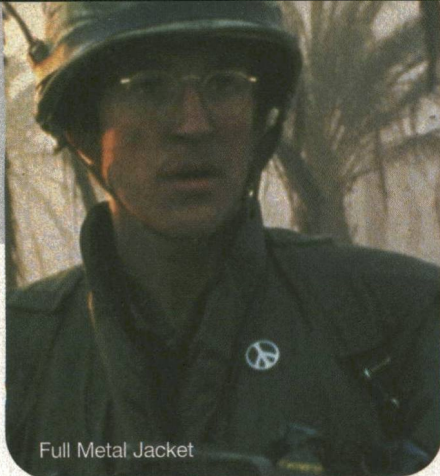

The French Connection

Sky Movies Cinema, Saturday 21st, 10.00pm
Young upstart director William Friedkin employed a raw street style, previously only seen in the arthouse offerings of John Cassavetes and the French New Wave, and put it into a mainstream cop movie context for this ground-breaking, fact-based 1971 classic.

The film, that dramatises a famous 1962 heroin bust, won five Oscars, including best director, actor (Gene Hackman) and picture, and its dirt-under-the-fingernails documentary look became de rigueur for any urban drama trying to convey a sense of edgy urgency. The you-are-there camerawork and pulse-pounding editing of its brilliant car chase, too, has been much copied but never equalled. Friedkin bravely makes no excuses for the brutal methods of New York narcotics detective 'Popeye' Doyle (Hackman), who, when he's not roughing up suspects, is unsettling them with the hilariously surreal question, 'Did you ever pick your feet in Poughkeepsie?'

Superfly

Sky Movies Cinema, Monday 9th, 10.00pm
Those familiar only with Curtis Mayfield's slick soul score, may initially be surprised at how ragged the 1972 film it complements is. But they should stick with it, because, under the tight, funky direction of the late Gordon Parks Jr (whose film-maker father had made the genre benchmark Shaft the previous year), the somewhat clichéd tale of a dope dealer pulling one last big job before going straight attains a kind of grubby grandeur.

Do you have a comment or a question about what you're watching on cable TV? This is the forum where you can share your views (and there's the small incentive of a £50 prize for our favourite monthly letter), so get writing!

VOCAL HEROES

I am a big fan of History Channel and Discovery. There is always an interesting documentary to watch on both. I would like to say a good word for the men and women who never get any recognition but who can turn a good documentary into an even better documentary. I am talking about the narrators of these shows. Most of the wildlife shows that come from the United States seem to involve TV or film 'stars' who need the publicity; for instance, swimming with dolphins with so-and-so. I, and many other viewers, prefer a British narration, and I would single out Sean Barret for high praise. So next time you are enjoying a documentary, spare a thought for the person behind the voice.

Sean Dwyer, email

QUESTION TIME

I have been wondering whether shows such as Ready or Not, which used to air on Trouble, and Once and Again, which aired on Sky One, would be repeated in the future. These are both great shows and I regret that I did not have the foresight to tape them both when they first aired. Also, I have heard that a second series of Once and Again had been made and wanted to know if there were any plans for it to be shown on Sky One.

This is the first time I have written to Cable Guide, but after reading the helpful responses to other people's questions and requests, I thought that it was worth asking my question rather than just wondering about it.

Michelle, email

We're pleased to help, Michelle, although unfortunately the news isn't good. Sky One inform us that there are currently no plans to acquire series two of Once and Again or to repeat the series. A Trouble spokesperson replies: 'Ready or Not was a great show that was enjoyed by a lot of Trouble viewers, but unfortunately it won't be making a comeback to the channel as we no longer have it in licence.'

MORE MICHAEL, PLEASE

I have been a huge fan of Chad Michael Murray ever since I saw him in the first episode of the new series of Dawson's Creek on E4. Since then, I have been addicted to the show, watching it on Monday, recording it, watching the reruns

Murray mint: Kelly, a big Chad Michael Murray fan, hopes to see a lot more of this Dawson's Creek favourite on Second Chance Sunday, etc. However, I hate all the characters on the show (apart from Charlie obviously!) so I really want to watch something else with Chad Michael Murray in. I found out that Gilmore Girls (by Warner Bros) was the only other series that he has been on, so I was wondering if you could satisfy this slightly addicted fan and tell me if Gilmore Girls will be on any channel in the near future. Please help!

Kelly, email

Gilmore Girls is not due to be picked up by Channel 4, E4, ITV2, LivingTV or Sky One. Looks like you may have to make do with the repeats of the latest series of Dawson's Creek on T4 Sundays (Channel 4), Kelly!

PRIVATEES ON PARADE

Would you be able to tell me if there are any plans to repeat the TV series Lads Army? I missed one or two episodes at the beginning of the series and I would love to watch the entire series from beginning to end. Perhaps ITV2 may show it again? Or if not, are there any plans to release the series on video or DVD either now or in the future? I know there are a number of books to accompany the series but it would not be the same as seeing it on the TV. Hope you can help.

Stephen Smedley, email

An ITV2 spokesperson replies: 'Unfortunately, there are no plans at present to repeat Lads Army on ITV2. However, we are replaying our successful companion series Lads Army: Privates Exposed this month.'

LIFE BEYOND BIG BROTHER

E4's coverage of Big Brother was interesting. It was a bit like a fast food version of Survivor but made more compulsive viewing. I hope that E4 has plenty in the pipeline since my nightly dose of Big Brother has ended, like repeats of Shipwrecked or Five Go Dating.

Andrew Jones, Cardiff

An E4 spokesperson replies: 'Don't worry too much about the lack of TV after Big Brother. E4's currently showing Friends right from the very beginning, weekdays at 8.30pm, and the big hit is the new series of The West Wing, Thursdays at 9.00pm. E4 is also showing the very best programmes of Channel 4's V Graham Norton, weeknights at 11.10pm. And new this month on E4 is Your Face or Mine?, a gameshow where couples have to say how good-looking (or not) they and their partners are for cash – lots of potential for Jerry Springer-style arguments and revelations.' See the Your Face or Mine? highlight on page 19 for more details.

LETTER OF THE MONTH

A fond farewell to Ally

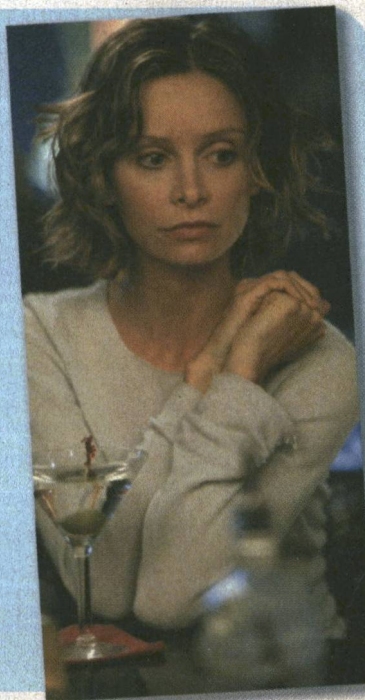

OH MY GOODNESS! I watched the last ever episode of Ally McBeal [Calista Flockhart, right] and I cried like a baby. So much for a mature 36!

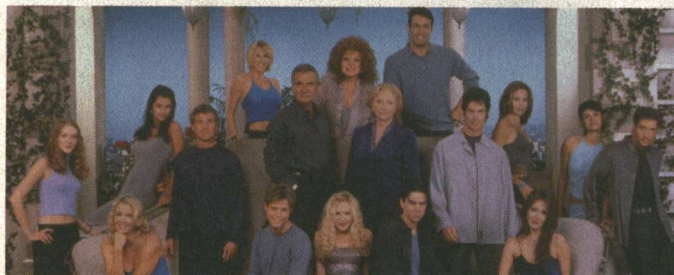

For five years, I've watched the dancing babies and all the boyfriends come and go; I've shouted at the screen for Ally to hurry up and kiss Jon Bon Jovi – I would have grabbed him WAY before she did; I watched her heart be broken, mainly by Billy, then by Larry; the joy and trepidation of discovering motherhood; and the rest of her life, weird though it was, was wonderful to watch.

I loved Richard for his wattle fascination; the Biscuit, John, for his nose whistling and stuttering; Elaine's perspiring when an attractive man walked by, and her want of the limelight; Ling's looks; Nell's ice-queen act; Renee's chest, that seemed to expand every episode. These are just a few of the things I could write about. Ally, RIP. You will be missed.

G Barker, email

Hopefully a cheque for £50 will help cheer you up!

The Bold and the Beautiful now resides in LivingTV's night-time schedule

A BOLD MOVE

I am getting so fed up with LivingTV showing a couple of my favourite American soaps and dropping them after a few months. This has now happened to The Bold and the Beautiful, which I find is on at 2.30am. I didn't mind as I thought I could tape it, but I found I got nothing! The channel is not shown in my area at that time. Surely it can be put on instead of The Golden Girls, which is shown four times a day. I am disgusted!

Barbara Heath, South Wales

I was very disappointed to see that The Bold and the Beautiful, on LivingTV, has now been moved to the later time of 2.30am. Previously it was shown twice a day and viewers thought it a bonus to have the omnibus on Saturdays. I am a very keen fan of The Bold and the Beautiful and I would appreciate it if it could be shown at an earlier time during the week, or, please, let us have the omnibus on Saturdays.

Mrs McDonald, Gillingham, Kent

LivingTV's Channel Controller, Richard Woolfe, responds: 'The decision to move The Bold and the Beautiful from the main schedule was not an easy one. We bought the programme with high hopes that LivingTV viewers would love it and that it would be a great success. Sadly this wasn't the case and we didn't attract enough viewers to the programme. I'm sorry that a few hard-core fans of The Bold and the Beautiful are disappointed with this change but I hope that they will enjoy some of the other fantastic programmes we show 24-hours-a-day on LivingTV.'

A LEAP TOO FAR

As an avid fan of Quantum Leap, I am bemused about why UK Gold is not showing the only three episodes I need to finish my collection. The episodes in question are Raped, Dreams and Southern Comforts. Will UK Gold ever show these three episodes? I don't even mind if they are shown at 4.00am on Sunday mornings, if that's the place they feel most comfortable showing them. It would be a shame if these episodes are ignored as Raped is one of the most powerful episodes in Quantum Leap's entire run. Other than this minor quibble, I love UK Gold, especially the Saturday stack.

Shaun David Anderson, email

A UK Gold spokesperson replies:

'These three episodes were considered "post watershed", which means they were unsuitable to be played before 9.00pm (when the rest of the series were shown). We have shown them in late-night slots in July and August - I hope you and other fans of the series caught them. If not, they will be shown again, either at the end of this year or the start of next (late night of course!). Nice that you like the Saturday stacks, it's always worth checking to see which entire series will be played!'

WHAT'S IN STORE FOR DBZ?

The new Dragonball Z saga is just wicked and I'm not going to miss a single episode. But this is the last saga of Dragonball Z and Dragonball GT is coming out - will Cartoon Network be showing them? Also, will they be showing the movies? I've heard so much about them and they sound just as good as the episodes. So what's happening in the future for DBZ?

Rahil Rashid, Bradford

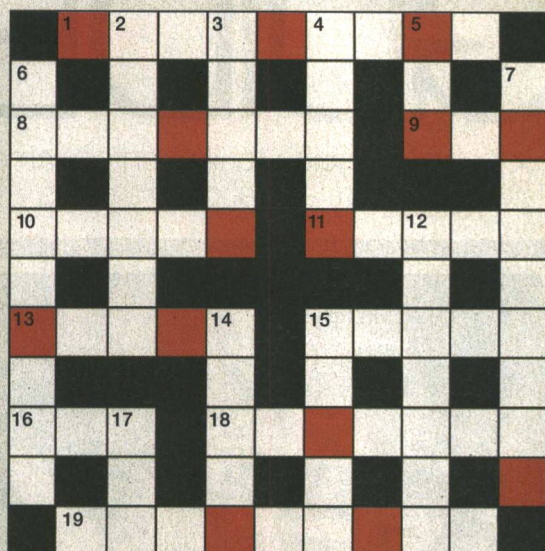

We're told that it's highly likely Cartoon Network will be showing Dragonball GT in the near future, but it's impossible to confirm anything. So stay tuned!

Malcolm in the Middle
Sky One, Sunday 29th,
7.00pm

Emmys for superb writing and directing ensure a third series of this great US teen comedy.

Where other teen series dollop plentiful amounts of syrup, Malcolm in the Middle opts for salt of the earth. Malcolm's mob engage in the usual family activities (shopping, going to school, watching TV), with the writers homing in on the characters and bringing you dialogue to die for.

Today, ball-breaking mum Lois (Jane Kaczmarek) has plenty to shout about when the family go on a houseboat holiday with Stevie's clan. First, husband Hal accidentally exposes himself in a sports shop. Then Lois interrupts Stevie's parents on the job. Finally Lois comes home to find out eldest son Francis has discharged himself from his Alabama military academy to head for Alaska.

FACTUAL

In the Wild with Debra Winger
Discovery, Monday
2nd, 8.30pm

Celebrity has its high points. In this new documentary series, Hollywood stars encounter some of the world's most exotic and endangered species. Debra Winger is first up, journeying across China on the trail of a wild panda, one of the most ancient and endearing of the bear family.

Winger left the big screen in 1995 following hits such as Terms of Endearment and

An Officer and a Gentleman. She recently returned in an independent hit, Big Bad Love, directed by her husband, actor Arliss Howard.

The couple have two sons from previous marriages, one of whom accompanied Winger on her oriental journey. The couple travel from the streets of Shanghai to the remote Qinling Mountains of central China, meeting a man along the way who can help Winger accomplish her mission.

It may be tough growing up in a showbiz family but there are always compensations.

KIDS

That's So Raven
Disney, Monday
2nd, 5.00pm

They don't come much more precocious than Raven-Symone, star of this new hit US teen comedy.

She bagged her first starring role in 1989 at just four years old, upstaging the great screen-hogger himself, Bill Cosby, in the number-one Eighties sitcom The Cosby Show. Aged five, she then signed her first recording contract with MCA.

Top-rating series such as Hangin' with Mr Cooper followed, and Raven-Symone then moved into movies, starring as Eddie Murphy's daughter in Dr DoLittle. To top it all, she was Muhammad Ali's special guest at his 50th birthday celebration.

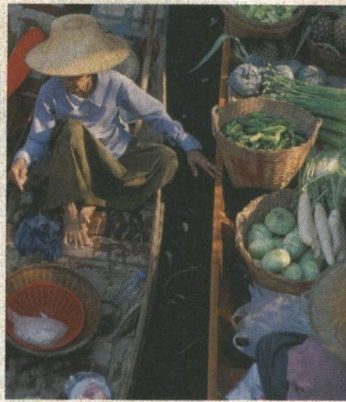

Today, no teen comedy is complete without its star having a few extra powers. In That's So Raven, the star plays a high-school teenager who's psychic. But instead of helping her through traumas with parents, boys and teachers, our heroine's premonitions invariably get her into trouble, usually through her efforts to head off the events she's foreseen.

MUSIC

The Osbournes Week
MTV, from Monday
23rd, 10.00pm

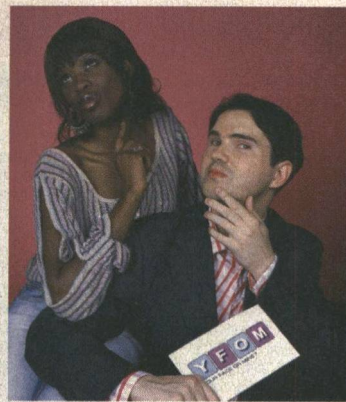

You've got to hand it to Brummy rock god, Ozzy Osbourne. He's fast becoming a national institution. Guy Ritchie, Harry Enfield, and Jonathan Ross are all self-confessed fans of The Osbournes, which follows the dilapidated rocker and his family behaving badly in their Beverly Hills mansion. All the first series is being re-run and there's the premiere of Ozzfest Uncensored (Thursday 26th, 11.00pm).

FACTUAL

Planet Food
Travel, Saturday
14th, 9.00pm

You haven't really understood a country's culture until you've tasted its food. This series provides both a window into the landscape of some far-flung destinations and the chance to explore their culinary traditions. Today, Padma Lakshmi visits Thailand, home to paddy fields, floating markets and some of the world's spiciest fresh ingredients. She also prepares Pad Thai noodles with a street vendor and masters the art of fruit sculpture.

GAME SHOW

Your Face or Mine
E4, weekdays from
2nd, 5.30pm

Downright cruelty or bare-faced cheek – you decide in this new comedy gameshow. Through a series of ever-more humiliating rounds, couples are asked how attractive they see themselves and their partner when compared to members of the studio audience, celebrities, good-looking members of their own family and even ex-partners. Those whose answers match the audience's can win a cash prize. But will their dignity remain intact?

Spotlight on Stanley Kubrick
TCM Stanley
Kubrick: A Life in Pictures, Saturday
7th, 9.00pm, Saturday 28th, 9.00pm

From his adaptation of Nabokov's Lolita to The Shining, from A Clockwork Orange to Full Metal Jacket, Stanley Kubrick made a wonderful range of films.

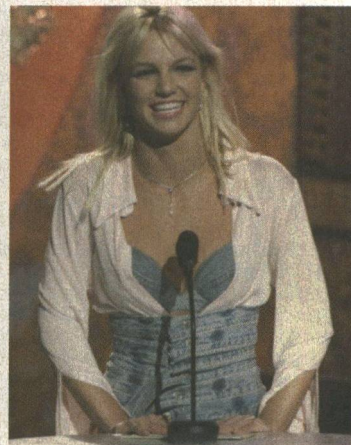

This month, TCM spotlights the director's oeuvre with some of his greatest movies, an insightful documentary into his working methods, plus short Close-Up and Studio Insider slots.

COMEDY

The Fast Show
UK Gold,
from Tuesday 3rd,
9.00pm

It's catch-phrase heaven, as The Fast Show returns in a re-run of the first series. Ex-East Anglia University students Paul Whitehouse and Charlie Higson realised that short was sweet, and assembled a medley of wild and surreal snapshots that successfully condensed their character comedy. Caroline Aherne, John Thomson, Simon Day and Mark Williams complete the laugh-a-minute line-up.

TEENS

Teen Choice Awards
Trouble, Sunday 1st,
4.00pm, 9.00pm

A chance for teenagers to prove their much-maligned judgement in the Teen Choice Awards. Stars they voted for will be up for the likes of Male Hottie of the Year. Famous faces from the worlds of film, music and sport will ensure a pop-tastic event. Can *NSYNC hold on to their pop crown? Will Britney and Justin bring new dates? Tune in to find out what the nation's youth hold dear at this glittering celebration.

TO THE POINT

FOOTBALL YEARS
Sky One,
Tuesdays from 3rd,
9.00pm

For those who are nostalgic for days gone by in football, here's a new series showcasing the best action from the past 20 years. Each episode explores a different year from the last two decades and there's first-hand commentary from players and managers, pundits and fans.

WHAT KILLED THE MEGA BEASTS?

Discovery,
Sunday 22nd, 8.00pm

If you thought the prehistoric world was a safer place after the demise of the dinosaurs then think again. This new two-part programme follows the fearsome Mega Beasts who roamed Earth after the dinosaurs for 65 million years and looks into why they, too, became extinct. Stunning computer graphics bring the Mega Beasts to life.

WATERGATE

UK Horizons,
Tuesdays from 3rd,
10.00pm

The recent publication of Silent Coup and subsequent lawsuits in the US have led to a re-examination of the whole 1972 scandal, which revealed President Richard Nixon had authorised illegal surveillance at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee. This Emmy-nominated five-part series provides new revelations featuring testimony from key figures of the period.

ZANE MEETS EMINEM 2
MTV, Saturday 21st,
10.00pm

Sunday 22nd, 7.00pm
 As part of MTV's Eminem night, Zane Lowe brings you another exclusive interview with the blond-haired, chainsaw-wielding white rapper. And it's precisely because Mr Lowe doesn't refer to the musician in this manner that he is Eminem's interviewer of choice this side of the Atlantic. Candid, compelling talk is assured.

Easy Ryder?

The Ryder Cup is one of golf's most emotionally charged tournaments. Following recent controversies, this month's event should continue the tradition. Words: Ross Biddiscombe

LAST YEAR'S PLANNED 34TH Ryder Cup was an unsuspecting and unusual victim of the terrorism that struck America. In the wake of September 11th, nervousness about international travelling and respect for the mood of the American people saw the event postponed for a year.

The Ryder Cup was the most high-profile sporting event to be cancelled, so this month's re-scheduled event at the Belfry will be charged with even more emotion than usual. Even so, it's fair to say that both the European and American teams will be under orders to curb excessive celebrations like those witnessed at 1999's tournament, held at Brookline, Massachusetts.

That year, Europe's then-captain Mark James deployed just nine of his 12 players in the opening two days to build up what seemed an unassailable lead. But during the final rounds, a boisterous American crowd, and some overly flamboyant home-team celebrating after an amazing turnaround created an atmosphere that would have been more at home in a football stadium.

Two years on – and 12 months after last year's cancellation – European skipper Sam Torrance is sure that restaging golf's most passionate event was the right thing to do: 'The decision to postpone was common sense. What happened put the Ryder Cup and everything else in perspective.'

'When you go through the gate of the Belfry, it doesn't matter how you've been playing for the past year'

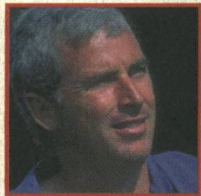

This year's tournament will also be unusual for another reason – all 24 players have had a whole year to either maintain or lose the form that got them into the two teams. For example, home favourites Lee Westwood and Swede Pierre Fulke have suffered a slump in form.

Meanwhile, the Americans have their own out-of-form players. Veteran Hal Sutton has lost that winning feeling. Likewise, Ryder Cup-rookie Stewart Cink is struggling.

So both captains, Torrance and American skipper Curtis Strange, will have to juggle their resources to hide weaknesses they weren't expecting. Yet Torrance subscribes to the notion that whereas form is for a season, class is forever. 'It makes no difference [about current form] because when you go through the gate of the Belfry, it doesn't matter how you've been playing for the past year. That week is the time when I want the team to play well.'

One man who seems to perform consistently well, despite a poor display at this summer's British Open, is Tiger Woods, whose ability is enough to make the Americans favourites – something they seem to be for every Ryder Cup. Indeed, with the normal points-scoring pattern likely – the Europeans controlling the foursome and fourball formats on days one and two, before facing a charge from the Americans in the singles on the final afternoon – the home team may need some extra inspiration to win.

The Ryder Cup warm-up didn't provide it. During the Benson & Hedges International Open last May, only five of the 10 European team-members at the Belfry made the cut. Even so, with September 11th still in mind, winning the event will probably be only of secondary importance. ●

LIVERyder Cup

Sky Sports 1,
starts Thursday
26th, 3.00pm

PAR FOR THE COURSE

Ryder Cup matches over the years have created individual heroes and dazzling partnerships in both the European and American teams, and this one should be no exception. Here are the players to look out for:

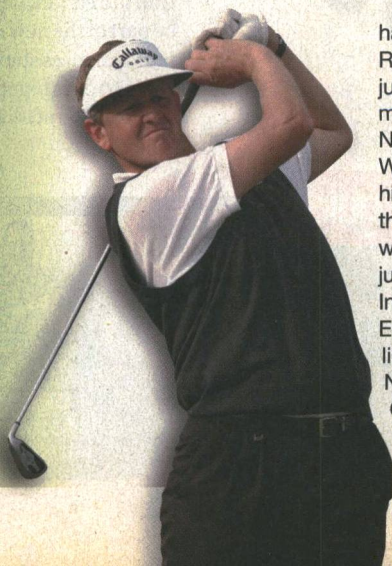

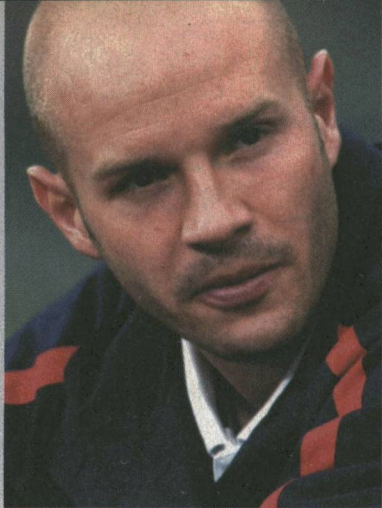

Ready for battle:
from top, Sergio Garcia,
Padraig Harrington,
Colin Montgomerie

Ironically, the two men most likely to take on this mantle for the Europeans – Spain's Sergio Garcia and Sweden's Jesper Parnevik – are usually seen playing on the US PGA Tour. Neither man played enough tournaments in Europe to qualify for the team but captain Sam Torrance decided the pair warranted a place and handed them the two wild card births. At Brookline in 1999 they gelled into an unbeatable foursome and fourball duo (winning three-and-a-half out of a possible four points) and could do so again.

In addition for Europe, Colin Montgomerie is showing glimpses of his best, while Padraig Harrington has crept into the world's top 10 as well as developing the temperament to beat anyone – including Tiger Woods.

Strangely, the 26-year-old Woods has yet to really make his mark on the Ryder Cup. Three years ago he scored just two points and even lost a fourball match when paired with then world No 2 David Duval. Nevertheless, Woods is a formidable opponent and his American team contains no less than eight major championship winners, whereas the Europeans have just one (Germany's Bernhard Langer). In those final-day singles matches, few Europeans will be fancied against the likes of Woods, Duval, current world No 2 Phil Mickelson or even Ryder Cup-rookies like 2001 PGA champion David Toms. ●

DANNY MILLS

Leeds defender and Cable Guide contributor Danny Mills insists there are positives to be drawn from the club's record-breaking sale of Rio Ferdinand to Old Trafford, and discusses Terry Venables' approach to training

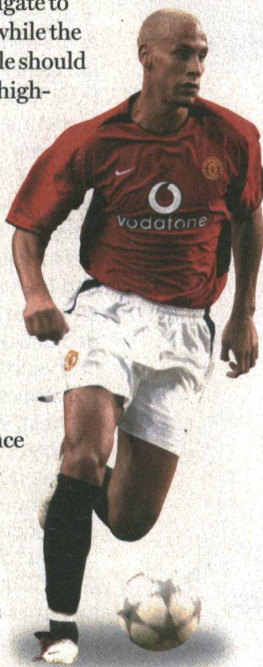

THERE'S ALWAYS EXCESSIVE rumour mongering and transfer speculation during the pre-season. But I must admit this summer's events at Elland Road certainly took me by surprise. Rio Ferdinand's fine form at the World Cup ensured his already spiralling valuation would increase further; likewise, the clubs linked to his name. And a £30m bid by Manchester United proved an offer too far.

Naturally a player of Rio's calibre will be sorely missed, and we wish him well at Old Trafford. But I believe there are more positives to emerge from the situation than negatives. His departure will now provide the platform for Jonathan Woodgate to show his undoubted talent, while the money recouped from the sale should ensure there'll be no further high-profile departures for the foreseeable future.

I must admit I did fear for our side's cohesion when I returned for pre-season training and found that bids had been accepted for Robbie Keane and Lee Bowyer, from Sunderland and Liverpool respectively. Both players have been fundamental to our emergence as one of England's foremost clubs and it would have been a tragedy to see them leave.

The addition of Nick Barmby and Paul Okon already shows the manager's intentions of bringing in

There may not be any Rio bravo at Elland Road now Ferdinand (below) has opted for Old Trafford. But his £30m move means that Leeds coach Terry Venables may give Jonathan Woodgate (both below, right) the chance to prove his defensive clout fresh blood and although I don't know too much about Paul, I am very aware of what Nicky can bring to the side. From his time at Liverpool, he proved himself to be a very versatile performer and with so many games on the agenda this season, I'm sure that versatility will be in evidence. Both players are internationals and have a wealth of experience, so will no doubt enhance the squad and our chances of progressing this season.

With my extended sabbatical following this summer's exertions with England, I didn't get the chance to meet up with the new Leeds manager until we'd begun our tour of Australia and the Far East back in the pre-season. Having only heard of Mr Venables' abilities as a manager, it wasn't until we'd completed the first leg of our tour in China that I experienced his coaching first hand.

Training with him since then has been relatively relaxed, with more emphasis on the game's technical side. And he's more than happy to listen to players' views. We've been told to express ourselves at every given opportunity and as an attack-minded defender, I'm determined that the new season will see my own form continue on the elevated path I took during the World Cup Finals.

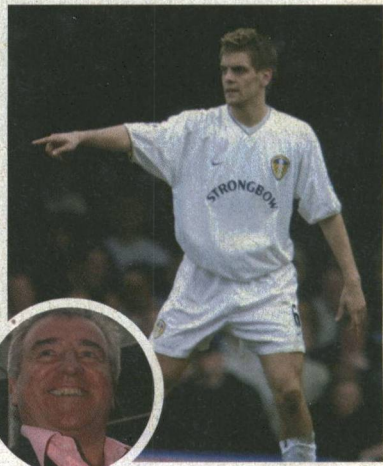

The positive atmosphere within the camp certainly strengthened throughout that tour. Every player selected was acutely aware they were on trial to a certain degree. We all want to be part of the new manager's plans and performances stepped up accordingly. After 10 days together as a squad, the spirit and bond that has for so long been an integral part of our team was clearly evident. We'll be looking to maintain that exuberance into the continuing Premiership campaign.

It'll be important to get a good run of results this month to help with our long-term ambitions. As we discovered last season, the sides that found themselves in the shake-up at the end of the campaign – Arsenal, Liverpool, Manchester United and Newcastle – established their positions at the top of the table from the very start, and I expect that situation to repeat itself.

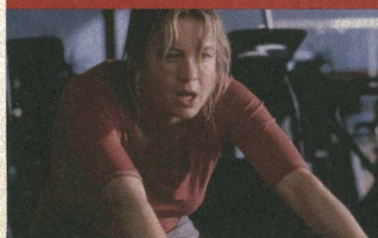

Yet don't expect me to predict who will emerge victorious this time. The aforementioned clubs have all strengthened their sides, with Liverpool being particularly active in the transfer market. Meanwhile, the likes of Chelsea and us are keen to improve on an indifferent campaign last time out.

Anyway, it all bodes well for another exciting season in the best league in the world. ●
